How much will shipping container hire cost me?

You will need to pay for the delivery of your shipping container plus 12 weeks of hire upfront. You may also need to pay for the collection upfront also, but after this you'll simply pay your quarterly rent in advance on an ongoing basis until you decide to stop your hire. We will refund any overpayments so that you'll have only paid for the duration that it was on hire and no more.

In terms of hire costs, they tend to fluctuate to a degree based on the cost of the containers, during normal times it is possible to hire a 20ft used container for just £7 + VAT per week, but this can move upwards when there is a surge in the shipping container price.

If you compare the annual costs of hiring a shipping container at your site versus using a similar sized self-storage locker there are some significant savings to be had, along with the added convenience of your goods being at hand at a moment's notice.

What happens when I'm done with my container hire?

We will arrange collection of your off-hired container as soon as haulier availability allows. You will be given a refund for the number of weeks that you had paid in advance, but didn't use it, so that you aren't being overcharged. Your request to off-hire should be made in writing, so that a copy of it can be saved to your account with a clear record of your notice given.

Which payment methods do you accept for container hire?

We currently accept BACS payments, cash and cheque. We don't accept card payments (Visa, Mastercard, American Express) at present. You will need to pay for delivery (and often collection) along with 12 weeks rent upfront and then quarterly in advance ongoing after this.
